They Did It Again

Edmonton taxpayers set a new record by prepaying $1,885,000 of the levy to be made for the present year. Since they did this every year, it has become just routine procedure. Unless a drastic change of conditions occurs in the meantime it is fairly likely that this year's figures will be surpassed next January. That the prepayment plan will ever be abandoned here is about as improbable as that taxes will cease to be levied. Yet, not so many years ago, it took quite a battle on the hustings and in the newspapers to get the plan tried out to see whether it was worth while.

The wonder now is that all towns and cities do not adopt the pay-in-advance method of collecting taxes. It has worked well in Edmonton, in Calgary, and apparently everywhere it has been given a fair trial. Not so much because of what the taxpayer saves in dollars, it seems probable, as because he likes to get rid of tax worries for a whole year ahead. Then, whatever may come or go he knows that his home will not be encumbered with tax arrears.

Library Expansion

Wide public support will be accorded to the projected plan of the Edmonton Library Board to acquire a number of sites suitable for future branch libraries. There will be general agreement with the policy of planning library expansion for many years ahead. The city library is one of Edmonton's most useful institutions. It places at the disposal at Edmonton people, and especially Edmonton children, all the literary and musical treasures of the world. Its staff performs this function with efficiency and care. It is not only reasonable but essential that this work should be broadened out to bring these facilities of culture and enlightenment and instruction equally to every section of the city.

There are many factors in the world today that tend to atrophy and stultify the imaginative resources of the young. Ready access to good books and good music constitutes one of the most potent antidotes to these poisons.

Anything that will enlarge and facilitate the use of the civic library will have been a gain for Edmonton people.

The Line of Distinction

The political de-coders at Ottawa have been working on the speech which Prime Minister King made on Tuesday, and say that he Left it to the projected Liberal convention to decide his political future;

Suggested but did not say that he will retire as party leader when the convention is held;

Said nothing about resigning the premiership.

Which is to say, the speech was in every way appropriate to the party gathering. As party leader Mr. King recommended that a convention be held and the selection of a successor considered, but did not force the issue by saying he would not carry on if asked to do so.

As to quitting the premiership, he reserved this announcement for the Governor General, from whom the appointment was received and to whom only the resignation can be presented, along with a recommendation as to who should be called upon to form a new government. No other course would be constitutionally correct, or show proper respect for the representative of the King.

If this omission from the speech was confusing, as it evidently was to the supposedly expert observers at the capital, that was only because these are less familiar with constitutional procedure or less mindful of political proprieties than is the Prime Minister. On these points he has in fact no superior, if any rival, in Canada.

Snow Removal

The city reports, with some satisfaction, that the mildness of the present winter has materially reduced the annual cost of snow removal from the streets. Expenditures for this purpose have been $10,000 less than those for the previous comparable winter season.

But if nature has co-operated generously in keeping the downtown areas free of slush and ice, the same cannot be said of the owners of some business premises.

The sidewalks in front of many business institutions have been kept admirably clear. The sidewalks in front of many others were left clogged with lumps of ice, which became particularly dangerous in a mild season when extreme frost does not remove their slipperyness.

Usually, the responsibility for keeping the sidewalks clear and safe rests upon the proprietors of adjacent premises. This responsibility should be more generally respected.

Nobody Responsible

The United Nations Commission on Palestine, naturally enough, has decided that it cannot carry out the partitioning project without a good strong police force. Now it is facing the question where the troops are to come from, and the answer is not clear.

The United States has served notice that it does not want to shoulder the burden to Palestine, and is equally against allowing Russia to supply the disciplinary troops, if Moscow is willing. Britain has repeated, in very positive terms, that it is not going to be the "goat", and will proceed to withdraw its forces according to schedule.

That leaves only the Security Council as a possible provider of the enforcement army. But the Council hasn't any force and hasn't any move to organize one, though the Palestine mission falls more appropriately to it than to any single power or combination of powers. Since the General Assembly only said the country should be partitioned, not that it would do the partitioning, the Little Assembly has no authority to raise a police force to cover the operations of the Commission.

Meanwhile the shooting goes on, grows more violent, and promises to expand into full-scale organized warfare when the British troops move out. The vote of the General Assembly in approval of partitioning is a fine example of doing too much or too little. It should either have left bad enough alone or taken the responsibility to carry through what it proposed.

It is a matter of record, which they tacitly admit, according to Mr. Crocken and Mr. Coldwell had parts in bringing about the official condition they now want to blame the Government for. When the war ended the Conservative leader urged decontrol of prices, and the CCF leader decontrol of wages. Both got what they asked for. Now they want the controls put back.

Moscow has published figures that show that production in Russia increased 22 per cent in 1947. Whether this was as much as hoped for, it is another reminder that Russia's business in its efforts at the right target—increased production. Governments of democratic countries might well adopt that "plan" from the policy of their totalitarian rival. In building the strength of a nation there is no substitute for expanding the output of goods.

A member of the Quebec legislature figures out that, at the present rate of births in Canada, French-speaking Canadians will be in the majority by 1971. That, he says, is why English-speaking elements are urging an active immigration policy, being afraid they will be outnumbered in twenty-five years or so. If his calculations are correct, he might point out one background reason for the difference in birth rates. Young French-speaking Canadians tend to stay in Canada and bring up families here, while too many young English-speaking Canadians head for the United States as soon as they get old enough to migrate.

Communism Is Intolerable

By Dorothy Thompson

In any "bourgeois" government, represents only the Communist International. The object of parliamentary or congressional government is to establish a consensus by deliberation between the various interests and opinions of the population as expressed through elected representatives, for the purpose of reaching a decision on the basis of the majority of the votes. Legislation in the United States is subject, in addition, to the rule of the majority of the members of the House of Representatives. These are the assumptions of our government.

When, however, Communist parties, exercising their legal rights, elect representatives to legislative bodies—either by promoting open Communist candidates, or electing persons who can exercise control—they do not do so on such assumptions. Their object is not to obtain "agreements" or "compromises," but to use the influence of government for disruptive agitation, and to destroy the representative system of the United States.

They do not hold themselves responsible to the voters, or to the public conscience, but to the central committee of the Communist party, to which they must agree formally in advance, to surrender their offices on demand. That branch of the party which thus controls government representatives like puppets on strings, the Communist party, as we have demonstrated in previous articles, is subject to the discipline of the Communist International. Any Communist, sitting in any "bourgeois" government, represents only the Communist International.

Trivia

A British lady, writing to thank some New York friends for a CARE package they had sent her, wrote that she had been much impressed by the ingenious way Americans have of doing up items of food—each one in a separate compact wrapping. "I especially admire your custom of putting each individual portion of tea in a separate wrapper," she wrote. "I should think you would find it rather tiresome opening up all those boxes every time you want to brew a pot."

Trade Flourishing

Canada's 1947 Exports Exceed Previous Year

OTTAWA, Jan. 23.—(CP)—Canada's exports during 1947 totalled $2,775,000,000, more than three times the average of the pre-war years 1935-39 and 20 per cent greater than in 1946, Rt. Hon. C. D. Howe, newly-appointed trade minister, reported yesterday.

Prices rose in most products contributed largely to the increase.

over pre-war years, Mr. Howe led at $1,624,000,000, approximately 16 per cent higher than in 1946, and more than one-half of the exports consisted of forest products. The United States and the United Kingdom continued to provide Canada's principal markets, with the U.S. taking 37 per cent of the total exports and the U.K. 27 per cent while 15 per cent went to other commonwealth nations and the remaining 15 per cent to other countries.

Rocky Indian Claims To Be Over 100 Years

ROCKY MOUNTAIN HOUSE, Jan. 23.—One of the most remarkable Indians of the Rocky Mountain House district, "Father Abraham" claims to be more than a hundred years old. The oldest old-timer cannot remember when he was not an old man, but he is as spry as a man half his age, riding his range, keeping an eye on his herds and his cowboys.

HE WAS BORN on the Kootenay Plains, 100 miles west of Rocky Mountain House, and was one of the Stomies who went to Glenora to sign a treaty with Queen Victoria in 1867. His tribe signed, all right, but these Indians who had lived on the Plains "since time began" thought the matter over when they reached home and decided that they liked the plains much better than the reserve at Morley where the government said they were to go.

So they refused to move to Morley. Abraham says that when the government pointed out that they had signed the treaty, his hand admitted that they had, but they had not thought it meant they would have to leave the plains.

ABRAHAM RECALLS that they held to their refusal to go to Morley and his herds thrive, as there is plenty of water and good grass on the edge of the plains where he lives. The Big Horn and North Saskatchewan rivers run through his land.

LIKE MANY other white men, Abraham deplores the younger generation. He says they don't want the old ways. All they want to do is to go to Stampede and ride in races. "His Indian boys now do as much work as two good Indians did 50 years ago," he complains.

When you see the first sign of threatened gum disease, a bad gum infection like gingivitis, you must take action before the disease spreads to your teeth and gums. If you don't,
you may have to have teeth pulled.

No, see your dentist and start using Furman's for the gums at once.
Furman's not only makes teeth gleam with a beautiful sparkling luster, it also checks bleeding gums, helps make the gums firmer with a lovely healthy pinkness. Notice the difference in the way your gums and teeth soon feel.
